Kerri McGovern serves as Special Assistant to Broderick Johnson, head of the Public Policy and Governmental Affairs group.

Prior to joining Bryan Cave, Kerri was as an Executive Assistant at AT&T Services, where she served as an executive liaison to three divisions: Federal Relations, National Security and Strategic Policy. It was here where she gained intricate insight into technological policy by monitoring congressional committee hearings and testimony regarding the successful BellSouth/AT&T mega merger. McGovern also served as the representative for the company with the Federal Communication Commission regarding network outage reporting.

No stranger to politics, McGovern is a 2002 graduate of the Campaign Management Institute at the Center for Congressional and Presidential Studies at American University. It was through this prestigious program where she gained skill and insight regarding the inner workings of running successful federal campaigns. As an intern on the Women's Outreach Desk at the Democratic National Committee in 2000, McGovern was instrumental in distributing literature to national groups and maintaining databases to shore up the women's vote in that critical presidential cycle.

While earning her bachelor's degree, McGovern was an intern with The Council for Excellence in Government's Leadership where she assisted various governmental agencies for staff inclusion in the Maryland Leadership in Action Program. McGovern also previously served as an Executive Assistant at Aaron M. Levine and Associates where she corresponded and networked nationwide with hospital, doctors and pharmacists regarding health care policy.

McGovern is originally from North Kingstown, R.I. and currently resides in Arlington, VA.
